Gov Abernethy's Appeal-The Call Answered with Men, Arms and Munitions-Jo Meak Bent to Washington for Aid

In their new homes among the solding of the Pacific, the American settlers enjoyed the great blessing of peace. The Hulson Buy company was a foreign corporation, with oppose eg, and at times conflicting interests, but the great humanity and Christian sympathy of its close factor, Dr. McLoughin, secured for them sup-plies and assistance that could not have been otherwise procured, upon terms that were ib-eral, considering place and distance. The Hud-son Bay company might have been, in a covert way, inin scal to Americans, and have greatly retarded settler ent. It dispels all though of ill-feeling and intention on the part of "the great memory, as some early writers of that company, to remember that kindness and assistance rendered Americans strongthough assistance renormal Americans strong notice and encorragid on tement that would certainly in time supplant lengths power and determine the then all powerful fur comp by There had grewing a semi-barbaric embre among the savage wastes and great mountain ranges that occupied the wide continent to the ranges that (coupled the wide continent to the north, from Puget sound on the west to Hudson's bay on the attaint—a stretch of 4 M0 miles from ocean to ocean.

The great chief factor possessed many of the qualities of a conqueror, and even in re-off the characteristics of a great ruler, for he had not only undispited control of many men who pensessive cavitation, our haname was respected and even reverenced as that of a mighty chief ia n among the savage tribes west of the Ricky mountains. He and the company he represented were supreme over this great territory. Had be wished to combine the scauge tribes under his dominion to sweep away missions and settlers, to free the mountains of independent trappers and hunters, it could have been easily done and it would have been difficult to fix the responsibility upon the Hudson Bay company of its chief. That he did not do so is plainly earugh shown by the history of early missions and immigrations. His warm sympathy with many Americans was shown by his kind acts, generous deeds and ground hospitality. So when war actually came the infatt government turned to ward the Hudson Bay company for assistance without a suspiction that it was implicated in the massacer, though at this time dolin McLonghin was not its chief factor and the Landon direction Lad reversed what was considered his too liberal policy loward Americans.

The lawn for a that was to have been given last Thursday evening in Col. John McCraken's grounds, was postponed because of the cold, cloudy weather. All the arrangements have been completed and, weather permitting, the affair will come of the morrow evening. A large, well-made dancing platform has been laid, the gypaycamp has been pitched, and the dairy maid's booth is already for occupancy. The grounds will be brilliantly lighted, a large number of swinging lanterns being dready in plaze. This offair is under the sole supervision of the young ladies of the Trinity mission guild, who will make the evening one of are pleasure to those who will pay them a visit. The young ladies propose to highest the picturesque, not to say romentic effect of an ordinary lawn party, by appearing in pretty costumes, some as the out brown gypey made, others as flower gird, who will wander through the spacious grounds, adding much by their fanc far costrmes and by their charming selves to the beauty and general effect of the party. The music will be the best, and the enloyment of those who attend will be complete. The assentence may seem a trifle strong, but those who remember the "Mikado Tea" or any of the numbrous cittertainments provided by these same young ladies in the past, will understand that it is a fact and no fiction. Every one should go that can, for the object is a worthy and charitable ond.

BOATING PARTY TO OREGON CITY. On Friday evening outs a party of young plac-ple went up the river to Oregon City on the La-tona, and had a most delightful trip. ART NOTES.
At present there is not much life in art, noting the exception of the one persevering member of the Art Club, & r. Brown, who persistently of the Art Glub, br. Brown, who persistedly keeps up his work before the public, the time actually exceeding als previous efforts. He has placed in exhibition on First street, some new scenes of varied effect and time. The first is a view of Mt. Tactum as seen from Puget Sound, the second a scene from Cryess Foint, Mehierey, 'al., and last y a beach some from the Cliff House, San Francisto. Each subject shows a careful study of atmospheric effect. On the water and we predict for this artist as much success in his marine as his landscape work. Mr. Br. wa leaves it a week or two for the Xellowstone Park to spoul the summer in studying the beauties of that famous locality.

AMUSEMENTS.

The week last has fully demonstrated to any thinking person that the annaement loving por-tion of Portland's population is far above— from an artistic point of view—that of almost any other city in the Union. This may seem a broad assertion, but it is nevertheless true. "A Bunch of Leye" is one of the very best and funniest of that class of "things" which have no name or place a the true legitimate drama, either in trigetly, comedy, the hybrid meto-diatina, or even burissque. The better toted dramatic papers of the country have for the past five or a x years done their best to deery the cause for such "Things," but it has been to no past five or a x years done their best to decry the craze for sur; "Halogs," but it has been to no purpose. In every city in the Union these "things," allouing the best of which can be named. "A Bunch, of Keys," fishipped by the Light of the Moon," "The Tourist," "Hebbes," and perhaps "A Rag Balty," have drawn large houses to the exclusion of all eise. None of them have any pith or point to their story, but are la mere weblide for the intro uction of specialities and a lot of rough comecy which has been aptly called "horse-plny." Here in Portland, even, several of these "things" have been attempted, but all-paps scored most dismai failures. Herecofore the biame has been cast on the actors them-salves, as be oughng to "snap" or "fake" coupanies, but this come pany of people giving "A I unch of Keys" are all clever, well known and yell pund; and yet hey have played to loding business. Messra, Crosby and Cahifeld and Maitala and her call y canedians, and the mere fact of their being in such a place proves that these while here in the plane of many such companies who have been in the allow the open propiets good sense. It will unboubtedly make a change in the planes of many such companies who have been in the flavor of their being in such a place proves that these while have been in the line of the companies of the propiets good sense. It will unboubtedly make a change in the planes of many such companies who have been intending to dome here, and there will be rewer opportunities to go to the flant of the line of none fisch to be worth seeden. Shaning out of ten people, who went to see "A flunch of Keys," how they liked it, 'no good? Will be the arranged else? Which is all very true, but this oppie, or rather erough people were all good? "Yes, but what is there to H? No plot or anything else; they merely want of laugh, and as long as they can do that they lequire in further, lut are foolishly centent. merely want o laugh, and as long as they can do that they inquire in further, but are foolishly content.

To row a boat, to fear, run, ride, swim and shoot well are all yet fairly included among desent, health-giving, manly English sports, to which, for the purpose of self-defence against a ruffian, may be added the set of wrestling and puglism,—though these last are to be regarded as the last resort of a gentle name to be regarded as the last resort or a genterman, as they are always the first refuge of a radian. A prize-fight is nothing but a diagnosting speciacle of human endurance forced to a bolat of excess that is painful to witness. It may be interesting to a doctor occasionally to which a man struggling to keep his feet when his every look and movement betray the terrible stress of suffering be undergoes; to a surgeon such a spectacle might be interesting, so for that matter is virisection, but because we defend it in doctors we do not encourage a boy digest his disgrace would not save him from the reproach of a crime against nature. Whether he survived his felly or died of the colic he would be a disgusting glutton all the same, and would be a disgusting gration in the states, and the prize-fighter, who fights after all the out-raged forces of nature are pleading for mercy, is about as contemptible as the glotton who bets and boasts that he can eat the rations of a hun-gry mule at a single silting. The sight of such erformances is justly regarded by the law as performances by they regarded by the five demarking, since they educate the young to structure they could be seen as a five structure of the five they could be seen as the crazy throng that yell around a prize ining, delighted with the brutal spectacle of two mean, inflering from the chameful abuse of their budies, represent nothing better than the ferce-ity that revels in a dog fight, or makes a public holiday of hangman's day. Prize-fighters, for-tunately for the world, seldom live much beyond forty years, for, in spite of their rare physical powers, they, like professional madestriaus, caremen and all persons who abuse their budies by excessive training and exertion, end it poralysis and premature death. We have plenty of marly and womanly approximate in outdoor life without rushing to see some poor fool gam-ple the glory of natural health under his spuraperfecte of human degradation; it is the heat the approach that a faller ing feet; it is at best a very dull, demoralizing est approach that a fallen man can make to selling his body for abuse as a fallen widman cells it. Mr. Richard K. Fox, of the Fox Guzzitz, who presents champion bolts to prize lighter, is a much worse and more democaliz-ing person than any prize-fighter in the world, because he prints a vile paper that educated to joung into an admiration for all kinds of vice and crime, and he devotes his money puttir lication of prize-fighters and the enrich ment of prize-fighters. The relations of the great singer to this small tener have been notorious, but they do not seem to have caused the pair any social similar to the second of the second sec was he wife of the Count de Caux. natural query is, "Dose Genius need any Character?" Apparently not: for when bamb Berndhardt held a reception in London a few years ago, when she was a mother without even being a wife, among her visitors were Gladstone, and Sir Frederick Leighton, the artist. Bernhardt was not received in American social circles, but that was a mere taprice, for Adelaide Neilson, quite as deprayed an actress, called on the poet Longfellow; and Henry Irving was received everywhere, while Miss Perry, who has equal talent, was denied the social clemency shown Irving, I Charles Dickens esparated from his wife for reasons purely selfish, that would have macabin a cammon cry for leathing and contempt in any town in America, and get he escaped all social ob-logus on either shie of the water. Nelson, Fox, Sheridan and Brougham are familiar illustrations of the fact that genius without character gets clong socially about as well as genius with character, like Gladstone, Bright and Colden. In American society Calbour, a purist in private ife, was not more eagerly sought by the top of good society than his great rivals whose vices were notorioue. We do not remember the name of a distinguished man on either side of the water who ever seriously lost casts or was placed long under social ban, because he was a drunkard, a had husband, a rous or a The world is not inclined to hold genius at all responsible to the ordinary tandards of social morality that mediucrity ca by good circles in England; but so was Rache another great genius, with a most odlons tain of the gutter about her in all her private rela-tions. This is making the absolute standard of good morals a sliding scale, the moment that irregular genius imperiously presents itself for When the Beecher trial was in pro gress a keen observer remarked that the worst feature of the whole business was the revelation that so many men and women within and without Plymouth church had no absolute standard of morality; it was nothing but a variable slidor morality, it was nothing but a relative sing scale of fashionable propriety, and the danger was that if Beecher escaped disgrace and publishment he would set the fashion for many church-going, if not religious, people; that ar able elegent preacher was not to be judged of concerned according to the same code of so-cial morals under which an ordinary man welld be premptly convicted and punished. In other words, the more william the man the more excusable the offence. Madaine Remusat eave that the first Napoleon used to always tusreas that the tips respond used to always jus-tify his questionable actions on the ground that he was a superior being, one man of remark-able endowments among many millions, and that he could not be judged, approved or condemned under the ordinary rules of human conduct, and he wanted the world to level the standards of morality and social descay to no-commodute the prunks of his gerius! There is a taint of this magnificent egolism about Beecher, and this false and shallow sphilosophy of right and wrong was enthusiastically accepted by thousands of persons in extenuation, if not justification, of the gigantic efforts of Beecher's church to screen and save him from the retribution that would surely have been his had he been plain, obscure Jones, Brown or Robinson, without notable in tuence or emi-nence in the church, society or policies. Some keen writer has said that while man has an absolite standard of mornity and honor, woman, as a rule, has only a sense of propriety that resis on some fast of fashion, and the result of the sector trial testified the fear that it would become fashionable for charches to act in accordance with this theory of the divine right of a great preacher to go as he pleased. In other, words, the develor of the Plymoith church clausing to their chief was the devotion of a Jestit, defending evil that good reight come; so that Piymouth church found itself sincerely sobbing over Beecher and saying that whether gui ty or not, as charged in the indictment, he

Reacher had brains, elequence, dational reputs tion, a genius for dramatic performance in the tion, a genius for dramatic performance in the witness stand, and a powerful church at his back, while Downs resembled Beecher in nothing save that both were preachers and that both were accused of adultery. Downs forgot that while a great warrior king, like Richard the Third, may be a hunchback, every i unchback is not a great king, and, by the same reasoning, while a great preacher may be an adulterer every clerical adulterer is not a great mau. Beecher, fighting for his life and honor, was no little peacock parson screaming and strutting to and fro before the public. He was a liou at hay, while Downs was only a polecat in a corner, a creature not difficult to polecat in a corner, a creature not difficult to destroy if you can, endura the full accompanies his exit. SAVED FROM DEORNING

Says the Astora a Mr Duniap, at I c clock yesterday morning, brought four fishermen ashore at Canby, whom he fortid on Peacock spit in a drowning condition. The men say they were trying to get out to the spit when their bont fonied and they were at the mercy of the breakers. This was about 1350 P Mr, as toeir watcher stopped at that time. They hung on to the boats for nearly three hours, when two of them tried to swim asho e by holding of to a boom but, after swimming a few fathous, found they were too exhausted and returned to the boats. They told how they would hang on sometimes only by a small finger, their hands being in such a numbed and cramped condition. They were thinking of letting go, but the timely arrived of Mr Duniap saved thair lives. When brought to the Cape they could neither talk nor stand. They were received and kindly treated by Copt. BOY BADLY HURT

Early this morning a 12-year old son of Mr Cooke, the proprietor of a livery stable at the comer of Sixth and C streets, met with a very painful accident. About o o'clock the lag took a horse and buggy from his fa her's stable to a gentleman living at the cornel of Sixth and Caruthers streets. He drove the animal attached to the carriage, undied a horse on which he was to ride back. After delivering the purgy, young Cooke mounted his pony, which was a fiery spirited little animal, and started down the street. The horse was "beeling his oats" and

The bay sort lost al control over the pour, which came fixed, along at the top of its speed. Finally, after a great deal of pulling and sawing on the bid the horse was brought under partial control. Just as the animal and reder came to the coroser of Fifth and Lincoln streets, the poor took a sudden and unaccompable scare at two men and restimed its wild right. The horse made a "bee hie" for its stall in the stable at the corner of Sixth and C streets. Reaching that piace, it made a sudden swetze to enter he door, but, attaking on the damp planks leading from the sidewalk, the anima a feet slipped, and both rider and horse came cown with g eat welfence near the door. The boy fell on his s de and face, and for some moments was completely stunied by the violence of the blow. He was almediately picked up, when it was found that all his front teeth were knocked out, his face hadly bruised, and his arms and legs very pair fully jammed up. No bones were booken, and no internal injuries suitained as far as it could be ascertain as

It is possible to increase the prise. The way to do it is lo secured a reduction in the frequent of the loss of farmers and specular transitions in the content of the content of the obtains reduction by means of letter to the management of the O H. N. Co, ask ing for it. The facts that there were great quantities of wheat in the country, that i rated a 10 cents a 1 shell and had to go to market over the O R. A. N. Inse, prevented a reduction, mother requests is note hable to be grantle.

The foct dolders of the O R. A. N. Co. hold as an in in measuring at Portland next Yonday,

The tocatolders of the O R & N Ca. hold The stock olders of the O R & N Ca. hold an ann all meeting at Portland next Monday, for the elect on of directors. A request for reduced freight rates on grain to Portland made at that time by the heart of trade, which a composed a part of farmers, and by the people generally would doubtless produce good results. Nor should Walla Walla be the only one to ask Waitsburg Dayton, Milton, Pomerny and all the rest of the country dependent on the O R & N Co for means of reaching market should ask that they may receive rest of the country dependent on the O R & N (c) for means of reaching market should ask that they may receive

One thing is certain It an increased price for the short crop cannot be obtained there will be great financial distress to the Walla Walla country, next fall The O R & N Co, whose stock was run up from $65 to $105 by the freights fail it by thelproducers of the Walla Walla country, for carrying their test crop to market can make the same producers rejoice by lowering the present freight charges, or they can make them despendent and throw them into great functial sufferings by refusing to reduce freights. That company holds our prosperity in its greap

The nate is important enough to warrant the holding of a special meeting of the board of trade and the taking of prompt, vigorous action

Concluded 1

"If the story into the shorp business she ought to trade you we there for every ling and any shorp and botter the Tutawillah grew nore turbulent in its bed, bringing down the cititing abows from the in-matus awaited the couning of the shearers. They had done their purt for Plulip. Their fleeces were close and heavy and the lambs were now fat and made an old log in the corral resound with their playing every night before going to be and every morning before going to be and and and be the regit before going to be and and and before and he will be about the store where help had made all preparation for shearing. He had employed Brown to cook and Dora to belp him, at the suggestion of herself and with the acquitescence of her mother He agreed to pay her the same wages as he would not have the store where they had been to spend some of their morning and an advision to the work. He was a busine the some point he lake to was on a head. When, Brown shield tumble over one an other in their eagerness to follow the motions of the shad. Showly the alleve wound them was put to the crowning polat of the bill. Phi ip full the strength of the bill. Phi ip full the strength of the work of the wide of the bill. Phi ip full the strength of the bill. Phi ip full t ander a sport of prespective indust y was to also sack the wool.

The shearers came galloping in one morning early in a hitle cavar. Cute having come from the store where they had been to spend some of their money made at the last shearing. They had also been in the rear room at the store. They threw their binnests on the grain, hobbled their captures which they turned loose on the hills, and scattered under a tree where Brown had directed from to find the grindstone. Here some of them were busy sharpening their shears, while others went to the shearing pens near by and began tacking up capity fruit cans in which to keep their shears when not in use, or were fastening their whetstones, or counting the strings with which the fleeces were to be ted, for the shearing was about to begin.

"Nou might be," muttered the man'te himself as he went back to the corral with his goat oil, "I have wasn't blind, as the old hasyn't."

The shepherd's harvest continued for several days. Brown and Dora would, after supper his their plans for the morrow's campation, and after she west home, whither Philip a companied her Brown lag unlessly in his beet revoking in his mind great schemes for feeling the hungry and sometimes lost in a saver confix sion in his great schemes should the "durie well shound in his great schemes should he "durie well sion in his great schemes should he "durie well sion in his great schemes should he "durie well sion in his great schemes should he "durie well sion in his para schemes should he "durie well here of dear Days." Now, livery," he would say, 'we will be a saddle of mult'in for dinner to-morrow, and that, with the beef will be enough in the next line win't it."

"But," would she object, it is so in ich bet ter wasled, you know I rown."

It will do for the men they like at old and for Ptilliess In elim a mutton chop for black fast, and whatever he wints for dinner and say per. "Well, that will do be town."

They threw their blankels on the ground, hold bled their crystees which they turned loose on the hills, and scattered moder a tree where Brown had directed them to find the grindstone. Here shears, while others went to the shearing pens near by and began tacking on empty fruit cans in which it keep their shears, while others went to be test for the shearing was absent to the stearing pens near by and began tacking of empty fruit cans in which it keep their shears, while others went to be test, for the shearing was absent to begin and the strings with which the fleeces were to be test, for the shearing was absent to begin and to begin and the manyer intendent of the shearing was absent to begin. The men were a damperous looking to trush and and all arned "Who is the captain of tour gang, boys" inquired Brown .

"Who is the captain of your gang, boys" in the men, a sunty hreang fellow "Are there any woman folks shoul the house" asked the man, quite notlifies and glad to change the subject. "They will just as prings asked the man, quite notlifies and glad to change the subject. "They who, advancing with extended hand the man, who knew to mail the time, and who was the enplain of the crew "Mother at the house" said another man bone of his companions. "I should say so Theore's a poung lady up there, and ship just as purity as it she was thread of to timber—you betcher"

For dinner the man bathed in the river, put on their "sto" clothee" and at the lank; it would have been difficult to determine whole some was the most pointe, for horse was the most pointe, for horse was the most pointe, with lors a contribution of groeseberry pies, cream and sugar was pronounced a success by the men.

TWO STILETTOS.

BY CONBOD NORE, AUTHOR OF THE WIELL'S DIAMOND."

[Written for The Sunday O egonia. ] Once upon a time I was the owner of a onewint cerions old Italian stiletto which I had bought for a song at any ion down in the neighborhood of Clinton Page. - It had a slender prism-shaped blade, about seven inches long and a half an inch thick at the base, where it tapered away leisurely to the point. Two of the three facets were energyed with an elaborate running scroll. and on the third you distinguished what at first sight, yea would certainly have unisblood-stain, but what on closer inspection you recognized for a straggling inscription in dark red enamel. "Per Vodio of tones, being the rather ambiguous trainin purase. The hilt was of silver, eleverly virought in imitation of a humon inger; and at the extremity an unusually large and brilliant opal did days for the

I suppose it is needless to say that I valued this stiletto highly. As a keepsake of the time when the flavor of romance still lingered about the world, it prompted a thousand interesting dreams. In what historic hands it might have treabled! Perhaps Paologhad worm it during bis visit to Francesca. Perhaps Queen Joanna had dis-posed of all inconvenient lover with it. At survinte 1; did not doubt that, if it only had a tonghe it could leave whispered many a firilling secret. The spark pent up in the opal was all that remained of the fires teached burged in dead men's breasts ... per Californ Person. It was like Hans Andrewn's upigical goldshes. I had out to press it in try chep and be transported over the sea and the centuries to I do and the nucleile ages.

So as i dized it Class, the reader will easily imagine and he wood modning when, through sheep and mess in my part, it sustained an irreparable injuly. While handlink it, according to my frequent cus-tom, somelow I cardlessly allowed it to slip from my grasp and drop upon the hearth. Of course I hastened to pick it up, but the damage was already done. The dual, which

An immediate and thorough search failed to recover it. I wasted more than an hour tansacking every nook and cranary of my chamber. Then I called in the servalt and been diskys! to be reven for an instant, and therefore in which operation I did not cisclain to assist, but to no avail. The operation it was aboning by morbid, and I was fast becoming if. At head to make his acquainture, I was his benefators, his posteriately refused to be found. Mrs. Freetom loved her more and more as days went by. Helen had not disapt futted her. Perhaps she would not have loved her so well had the girl been less attractive and ambitions. We at all human, and it is purekt tumonity to adore the breatiful and bridiant.

Mrs. Preston pucke at intervals in her leisurely, satisfied tone.

"What a styleucid breeze, Folen. Are you not too coolis dressed?"

"I am very tumifortable," the girl replied dreamily. She set low down in a rocking chair, it appeared, for she seemed to sway slowly backwards and forwards, with her dark, questioning cyke that fixed upon a bours across the way. The confour of her fixe was axquisite, the coloring was very cure, the carves about the mouth were tender. Her hadds lay like on her lap, and ooked a little darker than her white, thir dress. They were small, nervous hands, with slim fingers, unjewich save for the whita damond gif of Violet Prespon.
